

Teaching IOM/HMD: Implications of the Institute of Medicine and Health & Medicine Reports for Nursing Education (4th Edition) by Anita Finkelman, MSN, RN

Preface

Overview of the Fourth Edition

Outline of the Teaching-Learning Instructional Resources

Part I: The IOM/HMD Reports and Nursing Education

Chapter 1. Summaries, Recommendations, and Implications of the Reports for Nursing

Chapter 2. Implications of Health Care Reform for Nursing Education

Chapter 3. Connecting the Reports to Nursing Standards and Ethics

Chapter 4. Nursing Education and the Quality Chasm Reports: Critical Issues and the Implications for the Curriculum

Part II: Incorporating the Core Competencies into Nursing Education

Chapter 5. Core Competency: Provide Patient-Centered Care

Chapter 6. Core Competency: Work on Interprofessional Teams

Chapter 7. Core Competency: Employ Evidence-Based Practice

Chapter 8. Core Competency: Apply Quality Improvement

Chapter 9. Core Competency: Use Informatics

Glossary

Acronyms & Abbreviations

References

Index

About the Author

Anita Ward Finkelman, MSN, RN, the co-author of the previous three editions and author of other books and numerous journal articles, is a nurse educator and consultant with extensive nursing experience in clinical, educational, and administrative settings that inform her current focus on developing online courses, curriculum, and simulation learning products for continuing education, distance learning, and staff development. She continues her nursing work in Israel, where she is Visiting Lecturer in the nursing department of the Recanati School for Community Health Professions of Ben-Gurion University of the Negev in Beersheba.